464 for a fortnight of intense activity. Shearing is their only means of making money to acquire necessary goods. They are paid according to the number of sheep they shear per day. Those who are skillful may earn as much as [465] two or three hundred pesos during the season; even young girls make as much as 12 pesos a day. Such salaries, when compared with those of the working classes in Chile, are bountiful. Shearing time is the greatest event of the year, and it has taken the place of the old native feasts. The work, with its competitive aspect and the gathering of the young people in an isolated part of the island, breaks the monotony of daily life.

465 The standard salary for a day's work, established by the Chilean government, is 4 pesos plus half a sheep and other minor rations. The company has taken great care to give the natives a chance to benefit from the exploitation of the island. Export of corn has recently become a possible source of profit, and the company has tried to encourage the natives to cultivate maize. At the present time only two or three natives have taken advantage of this new source of income.

435 The most coveted foreign goods are clothes, soap, and perfume. The 439 first things the natives ask for aboard a foreign ship are shirts and trousers.
463 Money is accepted, but a shirt is preferred to a sum of money four or five times as great as the value of the article. In order to obtain clothes, they resort to the making of curios, the most flourishing industry of the island. The men carve wooden images, canes, and swords; and the women plait hats, crowns, or feather strings. Most individuals are able to produce these articles, but some are unusually gifted and have specialized in their crafts. Those who want a stock of curios to trade during the visit of a ship may acquire from the experts articles to trade on their own account. As the ships that visit the island are generally warships or freighters, it is easier for the men to get clothes than for the women, and any textile which may be used by women has a high value on the island.

435 Soap comes after clothes in the scale of value. Natives are always willing 439 to work or to exchange curios for soap. Combs, mirrors, cheap rings, or earrings are begged for, but not so eagerly coveted.

276 The islanders rely mostly on the products of their land for food, but 439 imported products are always welcome changes in the monotony of their menus. Flour, rice, and sugar are either bought at the company store or received as part payment for their work. The tobacco which grows on the island is considered too strong by the natives, who prefer Chilean cigarettes. Smoking is a widespread habit, especially among women.

152 Numerous conflicts have arisen between the natives and the company.
648 Stealing has been one of the chief sources of trouble, but many other difficulties have come from the turbulent spirits of the natives and from their easily excited imaginations. Easter Islanders are apt to believe the most unfounded
